D. M. WAGNER, Recorder. happy season has again returned. The youth are now jubilant over the arrival of the day over whose glorious history they oft have sit and heard their grandparents dilate in the narration of the unsophisticated pleasures of their ancestors. We presume many of your readers have a vivid recollection of a group of happy lads and lasses, assembled around a May-pole, and a pretty May queen being crowned with flowers. Benton's Thirty Years' View is said Rocky Mountains or the Sierra Nevada. There is a few words uttered and this to have already attained the sale of It amused him when he heard patriotic floral monarch is set upon her throne.

There is a few words uttered and this floral monarch is set upon her throne. Then follows other gesticulations and ceremonies, and the happy scene is over. All return to their homes, some glad, and others with sad hearts that they could not have been crowned "Queen of the May." But this old custom of monarchial countries is not known with us, and the first of May brings not so many pleasing recollections, or feasts of pleasure, as to the inhabitants of those countries where it is observed. It serves to remind us here that the season of planting is at hand, that the farm labors now demand our attention, and that we must make preparation for an approaching harvest. amounts to $2,285,850. Stars without number were then visible to us in mid-tact with our ears. Well, those were hard times then, and the remembrance of them brings back the many fancies we then had of what we would do when we were men. But at this season we again sigh for the days of our childhood. Then were we happy compared with the many vicissithdes and trials that now surround us.
